pponto nel licentiararmi che feci da S. S. Ill<sup>ma</sup>. in Roma saranno hormai tre anni per venire a questa volta; a posta per attender al Vocabolario precedente, se ben m'arricordo lei mi raccomandò e non senza qualche premura la compositione d' un Vocabolario Inglese et Italiano per uso di tutta la Nazione Italiana, hora in conformità del suo commando, negli intervalli della correctione e rivista del detto Vocabolario Italiano & Inglese, mi ci sono ingegnato & adoperato quanto si è potuto; e per esser che S. S. Ill<sup>ma</sup>. si è degnata per alcuni mesi di pigliar lettione di lingua Inglese da me in Roma, dimostrandosi sempre mai curiosissima di possederla a maggior segno, se non nell'atto pratico e discorso almeno nella lettura et intendimento, trovandola alla giornata una lingua copiosissima e concettosa assai; & tanto maggiormente quanto che, da certi anni in qua si scorge che s'è addimesticata più che mai colla lingua Latina, Italiana e Francese; per questo et altri degni rispetti hò voluto mandare a S. S. Ill<sup>ma</sup>. quest' opera mia col suo Honoratissimo Nome e Casato in fronte per suo maggior freggio & ornamento, acciò che dedicata alli meriti di S. S. Ill<sup>ma</sup>. ogni altro Italiano in esempio di lei divenisse vago di applicare a cotale lingua per scuoprirvi poi le sopraccennate delitie. In quanto poi tocca a gl' Interessi della Nazione Inglese hò dedicati ambidue li Vocabolarii all' Honoratissima Compagnia de' Signi. Negozianti di Turchia in Londra, concioche essa ogni tratto manda fuori li suoi giovani, hora nelle Fattorie d' Italia, hora in quelle di Turchia & altre parti del Levante, dove la lingua Italiana serve loro di mezza termine al negotio e traffico, e dove si hà da credere che questi Vocabolarii siano per haver ogni maggior spaccio; se l'esemplare che le invio per alcuna disgrazia di fortuna di mare venisse a smarrirsi, le ne capiteranno senz' altro degli altri per altre vie, e per altre mani, ma tutti però col medesimo impronto, e sottoscrizione che me le racconderanno in perpetuo

To all who desire to learn the ITALIAN Tongue.

S the precedent Dictionary is absolutely necessary for all such as are desirous to understand Italian Authors, so is this following no lesse usefull for such as have occasion to write Italian Letters, or to translate out of English into Italian, or otherwise to speak Italian: The want of this Piece, to the purpose aforesaid, and the earnest solicitations thereto, of my Friends and Acquaintance abroad, have been the main motives that have put me upon this Work; so that I make account now the businesse of Italian is compleated in the two Dictionaries, as to understanding, writing, translating, and speaking, as far as a Dictionary can go. I shall not need to set forth the trouble and pains that I have been at, since J. Scaliger hath done it to my hand, in his Poems of Works of the like Nature, which I have placed in the Front of the foregoing Dictionary. The desire that I have had, as formerly, so chiefly in this Piece, to serve the English Nation, hath made me wave my own private interest in many particulars, to comply with the Publick. I desire the Reader also to observe, that in this Dictionary I have shun'd and avoyded (as neer as could be) obsolete and forc'd words, and have chose to put only such as are obvious to the understanding, preferring good plain currant Money before gawdy Meddals. In the perusal, I presume, the Reader will be sensible, that I am

Z	Zeta.	Zeta.

Such as have not the the benefit of a Master, must peruse the following observations, before they pronounce this well.

The ITALIAN Letters are twenty.

A b c d e f g h i l m n o p q r s t u z.

Instead of x. we use single or double ss. or c. saying Alessandro, not Alexandro, Serse not Xerxe, Eccitare, not excitare, but Xanto a mans name is written with an x. to distinguish it from Santo holy.

P S founded broad, as in the English word, pawn, pane bread, found pawne.

C.

B Before a. o. u. is founded as English K. Before e. or i. as English ch, as in the words, cherry, children. cena, a supper, found chéna, ciità, found chità, a City, ch. is alwayes pronounced as k. in English, and if c. come double before the (b.) or before a, o, u. found them smartly; spécchi: looking glasses, vacca a Cow, stracco weary, found spekky, vakka, strakko, but if before e. or i. the first c. must have a touch of a t. eccettuare, found ecchettuare, to except, stracci, found stratchi, rags.

E.

S Sometimes is pronounc'd open; féle gall, as in the English sword, mea'y, sometimes close, bello fair, found as in the English

A Brief Introduction

English word, mellow. The pronounciation of these is best gotten by the eare.

BEfore, a, o, u as in English, but before e, or i as an English consonant, gênero, a son in law, found jênero, girândola, a circle, or fire work, found jeerândola. If it come between two vowels, the latter of which is either (e) or (i) it is pronounc'd as if a (d) were before it, vigilante, found vidgilante, watchfull, regente, found redgente, regent, or in government, as in the English words, wedge or ridge.

If it come double before a, o, u the same as in English, only a little stronger, and if double before (e) or (i) the same as when single before (e) or (i) only forcing of it a little more, as in the words Lêgge, Luiggi, found Ledge, Luidgi.

If (b) come between g, and i, or g, and e. then g is pronounc'd as gue, or, gui, in English, in the words guet, or, guide, botteghe shops, found bottegue, luégi, places, found, logui.

If it come before (l) then it is melted into another (l) figlio, a son found, filio, except in these words, Inglese, globo, negligente, neglino, conglutinare, where the sound is the same as in English.

If it come before (n) it is melted as it were into another (n) and as if an (i) should follow the latter, regno, found rennio.

The English words, onion, and, companion, will humour this pronounciation.

Gua, gue, gui, are sounded as gwa, gwe, gwi, guafare to spoyl, found gwafare, guercio blear eyed, found gwercio, guida a guide, found, guida.

H.

IN it selfe is no Letter, but rather a note of distinction to avoid equivocation, as appears in (ci) me, from (chi) who? (ce) us, from, (che) which, anno, a year, from hanno, they have.

ti, to the, from, (hai) thou hast (d) to, from, (ha) he hath.

Amo, I love, from homo, a fish hook.

Giaccio, I lye down, from, ghiaccio, ice, veggia a vessel, from veggia, a watching.

I.

IS sounded as English (ee) miniwo, the least, found metinimo. It is never used by good Italians as a consonant, but instead of it (g) is put before it, saying, Giovanni, John, not Jovanni, Giosèppe, Joseph, not Josèppe.

O.

Sometimes is pronounc'd open, as torre, to take away, found as in the English word, torrent, sometimes close, as torre, a tower, as in the English word turret, or near upon that sound.

The generall observations of the close (o) are these that follow.

1. Where (o) is accented it is close as, amò he loved.

2. Words ending in one, bra, bre, oro, oso, Oratione, prayer, qualbra, sometimes, Signore, Lord, or Sir, coloro, those, amoroso amorous, except when (u) goes before, as buono good, then it is pronounc'd as in the English word, bone, cuore, a heart, as in the English word, core, of fruit.

3. If it come before l. m. n. r. it is close, colmo top full, Roma, Rome, punta, a point, roundo round, except when i or u comes before it, as chioma a head of hair, Duomo a Cathedral Church.

4. If it come before gu it is close, as Bolagna, found bolagna, by these may be guest any other observation of the close (o). And where it doth not come within the compass of these observations, it is to be sounded open.

IS ever pronounc'd as English, k. when (e) goes before it, and smartly, piacque, it pleased, acqua water, found piackwe, acqua otherwise as the English in questo as in the word Inquest.

S.

Comming between two vowels is sounded like an (z) misero, found misero, miserable, desio, found desio a desire, except con, so, altri, also, and all words that have (ss) added to them as, scrivess, it is written, where its sound is naturall. (Sce) or (sci) pronounced as, sh, scelta choice, found shelta, scintilla, a spark, found shinilla. Before c. f. p. t. it is pronounced also in its naturall sound as, scida a ladder or pair of staires, sfacciao brazen fac'd, vespa, a waspe, studio, a study or University, but before d. g. l. m. n. r. u. as z. as sbarrà, a fence, sdègno disdain, sguardo a look, stattare to weane, smània madnels, sfoward nese, snodare to untie, stradicare to pluck up by the roots, sventurato misfortunate.

T.

Words that have tia, tie, or tio, tii, in the middle or ending, are pronounced as ss, as gratia found grassia, grace, gratie, found, grassie, graces, otio, otiso idleness, vitii, vitisi vices, except, ambasia an Extasie, facula a pinnace, malaria, a sickness, questione a question, quistione, a quarrell, molestia, trouble, ss, preceding i: tiene, he holdeth, potiute ye may be able, patiàmo, we may suffer, pariute, ye may suffer, and some other verbs, which use will discover.

U.

Sound as, oo, in English, luna found, loona, the moon, and when it is a consonant, then it ought to be character'd thus, v. and is pronounced as in English, as visio, virtù, vice vertue.

Z.

When it comes single betwixt two vowels, is pronounc'd as if a (d) were before it, medzo, found medzo the middle, azaro, found adzaro blew.

If it come double between two vowels, then it is pronounc'd as, ss, bellèzza, found, bellèssa beauty.

If it come after l. n. r. it is also sounded as (ss) misza found misza, the spleen, romiszo, found romiszo a Nag, forza found forza strength.

Divers words that begin with z. are pronounc'd with the sound of ss, others with ss, as zfo found ssio, an uncle, zoppo, found, ssoppo, lame, zéro, found sséro the figure of nought in Arithmetick.

The letters b. d. f. l. m. n. p. r. are pronounced as in the English; in stead of (k) we use (ch) instead of (ph) (f)

And thus much for Pronounciation, which being observed, with the Accents, there will be no difficulty in pronouncing the language, for generally the Italian tongue is pronounced as it is written and written as it is pronounced, without looking any letter or syllable.

Observations.

ALL our words for the most part end in vowels, as anima the soul, fi de faith, or trust, Luiggi, Lewis, corpo, a body virtù vertue.

Yet observe that E. or O. are not pronounc'd when they follow l. n. r. and often not exprest in writing, nor sometimes when they follow i. d. or m. as for example.

Mo.	habbiam ormai finito.	We have at last made an end, not habbiamo .
Le.	Ma mal non vien solo.	A mischief comes not alone, not, male .
Lo.	Bel tempo fa.	It is fair weather, not bello .
Ne.	Per ragion di stato.	Out of State Policy, not raggi-one .
No.	Di buon ingegno.	Of a good wit, not Buono .
Re.	Muor di voglia.	He dies with longing, not Muore .
Ro.	Il vero odio.	The truth hated, not Pera .
Te.	Fra Bernardo.	Brother Bernard, for Frate .
De.	Gran Soggetto.	An eminent man, not Grande .
To.	San Pietro.	Saint Peter, not Santo .

But if they end the sentence, they are written at length.

The Apostrophus is chiefly used upon the Articles! coming before vowels, as hath been already hinted.

The Definite Article, Il, or Lo, the or a Masculine La, the or a feminine.

Singular. N. Il, the or a
G. del, of the or of a
D. al, to the or to a
Ac. il, the or a
P. o. o.
Ab. dal from the or from a

Plural. N. i, or li, the
G. dei or delli of the
D. ai or alli to the
Ac. i or li the
P. o. o.
Ab. dai or dalli from the Singular. N. lo, the or a

G. dello, of the or of a

Plural. N. le, the
G. delle, of the
D. alle, to the
Ac. le, the
P. o. o.
Ab. dalle from the.

The use of these articles may be understood by the following observations.

Il, and lo, serve to the masculine singular, i, and gli, to the masculine plural.

La, to the feminine singular,

Le, to the feminine plural.

As, il cavallo, a horse, &c. li cavalli, horses.

Lo Spirito, a spirit, gli spiriti, spirits.

La scala, a ladder, le scale, ladders.

Il, is used before words, beginning with a single consonant, as il cavallo, a horse, il libro, a book, and so is, li, as li cavalli, Horses, but if the following word begins with an i, i is used for better sound sake, i libri, not li libri, bookes.

Lo, is used before words beginning with a double consonant, the first whereof is an s, as lo spirito, a spirit, lo strale, an arrow or dart. It is also used before words beginning with a vowel, and then it is contracted thus, l'amore, love, l'odio, hatred.

Gli, is used before words beginning with a double consonant: as hath been said of lo? and also before words beginning with a vowel, as gli amori, the loves, gli honori, the honours: but before e, it is contracted, as gli inimici, the enemies, gli infedeli, the infidels.

I, is used before words, beginning with a single consonant, as i fiori, the flowers, i fiati, the blasts, i libri, the books.

La, is used before words beginning with either single, or double consonants, la torre, the tower, la spada, the sword, but if before a vowel, then it is usually contracted thus, l'anima, the soul, l'arte, the trade, or arte.

Le, used before words beginning with either single, or double consonants, as, le torri, the towers, le spade, the swords, but if before a vowel, it may either be contracted, or not, saying, l'inimicitie, the enmities, or le inimicitie.

La, le, li, lo, coming after de, a, da, ne, double their l, as dello, of the, noi de lo, allo to the, not a lo, dallo, from the, not da lo, nella, in the, not ne la, unless in poetry.

Observe that, il, and lo, sometimes relate to persons, sometimes to things, and signify him, or that, as il vedo, I see him, or see that, lo vedo, I see him, or that.

Gli, and li, likewise relate to persons, or things either in the singular, or plural number.

Gli parlai, I spake to him.

Gli sentii, I heard them.

Gli ho venduti quei libri, I have sold him those books.

Li mandai avviso, I sent him advice.

Li scoppii ben, bene quei vestimenti, I burnt those clothes very well.

Li viddi tutti quasi affogare, I saw them every one drowned.

Il, lo, li, le, before, mio, tuo, suo, nostro, vostro, loro, &c. have no signification; and serve only for ornament as with the Greeks il mio capello, my hat, la mia frusta, my whip, the my hat were non-sense.

Observe that e, is gracefully put between gli, and lo, gli, and la, gli, and li, gli, and le, gli, and ne.

Giulo, to him it, masculine.

Giula, to him it, feminine.

Giuli, to him them, masculine.

Giule, to him them, feminine.

Giune, to him thereof, or therewith. And most commonly, it is used speaking to men; but sometimes to women: And this to avoid repetition, as menò certi cani all' Imperatore, or presentoglieli, or presentogliene, he brought certain dogs to the Emperour and presented them him, or him therewith; to avoid, saying, menò certi cani all' Imperatore, e quelli presentò a lui, he brought certain dogs to the Emperour, and them presented unto him.

Observe that la and le sometimes relate to persons, sometimes to things, as hath been hinted upon li, l'arma lo tengo forte, the weapon I hold it fast, le vedi quelle arme? dost see those weapons? è poco, non le basta, Its little, it is not sufficient for you, le, being a contract of, alei, which implies as much as, to her, to your Lordship, or Ladyship, &c. lo bacio le mani. I kisse your Lordships, or Ladyship's hands.

Observe that, mi, ci, ti, vi, si, coming before, la, lo, li, le, ne, change i, into e.

Saying in stead of

mi lo	me lo	me la	me li	me le	me ne
ci lo	ce lo	ce la	ce li	ce le	ce ne
ti lo	te lo	te la	te li	te le	te ne
vi lo	ve lo	ve la	ve li	ve le	ve ne
si lo	se lo	se la	se li	se le	se ne

The Indefinit Articles (Di) of (A) to (Da) from or by whether applied to person or place.

Note that the difference of the Finit article and the indefinite is chiefly comprehended in this point.

The definit article represents a thing limited and restrained, the Indefinit leaves it in its full extent, as un servitor di Principe a Princes servant, speaking of any Prince in general, not limited to any one particular Prince: But un servitor del Principe, is a servant of the Prince, where is meant some particular Prince, and soe consequently of the rest of the articles.

The terminations of nouns substantives and adjectives which are our declensions.

A

Words ending in a, in the singular, make e, in the plural, and are feminines, la porta, a gate, le porte, gates.

Except names of offices and dignities, which are masculine and make i, in the plural, as il profeta, a prophet, li profeti, prophets, but if it be accented then it is the same in the plural, as in the singular, whether masculine, or feminine, as la città, a city, le città, cities, il Potestà, a governour, li Potestà, governours, some have two plurals, ala, a wing, ale, or ali, wings, arma, a weapon, arme, or armi, weapons.

Vestimento, a garment, pl. li vestimenti, or le vestimenta, garments.

Movo, an egg, pl. gli novi, or le nova, eggs.

Observe that feminines are made of masculines, by turning ingo into amica, a hee-friend, amica, a hee-friend, bello, fair, masculine; bella, fair, feminine. And generally nouns ending in a, are feminines, except some few, as Duca, a Duke, Podesta, a magistrate, boia, an executioner, &c.

All nouns ending in anza, enza, rice, and one, are of the feminine gender, as abondanza, plenty, Pazienza, patience, ballatrice, a woman dancer, except poltrone, a coward.

a coward, salone, a great Hall, botcone, a morfell.

All nouns ending in o, and ore, are of the masculine gender, as amico, a friend, il ladro, the bearer, except mano, a hand.

These following nouns are seldom used, but in the plural.

GP amplessi, embraces.

Le carezze, dalliances, or caresses.

Le forbici, sheers.

Le nuzze, nuptials.

Le faccende, riches.

Le ricchezze, riches.

Merci, wares.

The scale how to make nouns signifie more or lesse, better or worse, in their severall significations.

Oro, Nouns ending in oro, declare the thing to be handsomely big, indifferently likely, as capello, a hat; capellotto, a pretty big hat.

One, Nouns ending in one, declare the thing something exceeding proportion, yet not ugly or despicable, as capello, a hat; capellone, a good big hat.

Accio, Nouns ending in accio, declare the thing not onely to exceed proportion, but contemptible withall, as capello, a hat; capelluccio, an ugly great hat.

Ero, Nouns ending in ero declare the smallness and prettiness of the thing, as capello, a hat; capellino, a pretty little hat.

ino, Nouns ending in ino declare the thing yet smaller and prettier, as capello, a hat; capellino, a very pretty little hat.

uccio, or uzzo, Nouns ending in uccio or uzzo, declare the thing to be of the least and absolutely despicable and contemptible, as capello, a hat; capelluccio, or capelluzzo, a little sorry ill-favoured hat.

And so in a thousand other examples, which is a very great liberty of the Language.

Now as hath been said of a masculine Noun, the like may be of a feminine, making of it to end in a, as cavalla, a mare; cavallona, cavallona, cavallaccia, cavallona, cavallina, cavallucina, or cavalluzza.

Most of the nick names are made to run upon this termination, as by way of detraction, as Minicuccio, from Dominico, a mans name so call'd; Minicuccio, from Dominicuccio, a womans name so call'd; Carlo, Charles; Carluccio, little Charles, Anna, Anne; Annucchia, little Nan; though some run otherwise, as Checco for Francesco, as Frank for Francis, Checca for Francesca, Frank for Francis, Mat for Tomaso, Tom for Thomas; as Mis Anello, for Tomaso Anello, a name sufficiently noted in Naples.

Observe, that if the noun that you would diminish end in no, na, or re, by making the same end in ello, if masculine; in ella, if feminine, you expresse a kinde of prettiness of the same, as asino, an asse; asinello, a little pretty asse; asina, a the asse; asinella, a pretty the asse.

Pastore, a shepherd; pastorello, a little shepherd; pastora, a shepherdesse; pastorella, a little pretty shepherdesse.

Some diminutives are also made to end in uolo, uola, uolino, uoline; as perzo, a piece, or while of time; perzuolo, a little piece, or while of time; perzuolino, a very little piece, or small while of time; also perza, a piece, clout, or handkerchief; perzuolina, a very small piece, &c. Also chiesa, a Church; chiesuola, a little Church; chiesuolina, a very little Church, or Chapel.

Some also end in essa, as Dottore, a Doctor; Dottorella, a she-Doctor; Medicessa, a she-Physician, from Medico, a Physician.

Observe, that nouns ending in ne, by taking away the last vowel, and adding ello to it, you expresse the smallness and prettiness of the same; as limone, a lemon; limoncello, a small lemon. The like if you adde, ino, to it, as limoncino, a small lemon. If the noun end in na, then cast the (a) and put cina to it, and you expresse the smallness and prettiness of it; as corona, a crown; coroncina, a pretty little crown.

Observe, that if you make a feminine noun to end in one, you expresse the bigness of it, and in a good sense; as bel salone, a fair great Hall, from sala, a Hall; che bel piazzone, what a fair great place; from piazza, a place.

Observe, that sometimes a diminutive is used after the augmentative, as homaccinolo, a little sorry man; donnaccinolo, a little sorry woman; and this is used in an ill sense; yet homacciotto, a well-set man, is used indifferently. Also, two diminutives are sometimes put together, to expresse the greater diminution or prettiness of the thing; camerissino, a little little closet, or chamber; sonettino, a little little sonnet, or ditty.

Observe, that such as end in o, or rather in ro, commonly make their diminutive to end in etto, as bianco, white; bianchetto, whitish; chiaro, clear; chiarotto, clearish, or pretty clear; duro, hard; durotto, hardish, or pretty hard.

Observe that nouns ending in esco, or esca, are much like the words ending in ish in English: donnesco, womanish; fanciullesca, childish.

Observe, that by putting giare, or zare, to any noun, signifying person, office, beast, or any creature, you expresse the quality, nature, action or condition of that thing, person or creature: as pavone, a Peacock: pavoneggiare, to play the Peacock; Pasqua, Easter: Pasqueggiare, to keep Easter; Volpe, a Fox, Volpeggiare, to play the Fox. Pavonezzare, pasquezzare; volpezzare, are the same, but not so frequent in that termination.

Observe, that verbs that are made to end in acchiare, are meant in an ill sense, and by way of disparagement: vivacchiare, to live hardly, to rub out; sonnacchiare, to slumber, to be drowsy out of laziness; scrivacchiare, to scribble; pacchiare, to feed like a hog. But this caution must be had, that in imitation of these observations one be bold, but not too bold, for the care and custome must be conductors herein, or else it is possible to mistake, as custome sayes, homicino, or homiccino, for a little man, not homotto; donnicciola, rather than donnetta, a little woman, though donnina is much in use: terricciola, a little town, rather than terrina, or terretta; vecchierello, a little old man, rather than vecchietto, or vecchino; murricciolo, a little wall, rather than murretto; fettarella, a little slice, rather than fettina, or fettetta; torrierella, a turtle dove, rather than torriera; ardisello, a little bold-face; frascarello, a wagge, rather than ardirino, or frascetto; testicciola, a little head of any beast; but testina, a little head of any person, or little head in cuts or ingraves. Good attention must make this difficulty.

Observe, that words ending in ame, the kind or extrem quantity is express'd thereby, as bestiame, all manner of cattel: pollame, all manner of poultry: uccellame, all manner of birds: legname, all manner of timber: rottame, all manner of rubbish: ossame, all manner of bones: carname, all manner of flesh, or any carcase.

Of the degrees of comparison.

Buono, good.

Migliore, better.

Ottimo, } best.

Buonissimo, }

Bene, well.

Meglio, better.

Benissimo, }

Ottimamente, } most excellent well.

caivo.

Peggior, worse.

Pessimo, }

Malissimo, } worst of all.

Male, ill.

Peggio, worse.

Pessimamente, most ill, or in the worst manner that may be.

Grande, great.

Maggiore, }

Più grande, } greater.

Grandissimo, }

Massimo, } most great.

Grandemente, greatly.

Maggiormente, the rather, or more especially.

Massimamente, most especially.

Piccolo, little.

Minore, }

Più piccolo, } lesser.

Piccolissimo, }

Minimo, } least, most little.

Inferiore, beneath, inferiour.

Supremo, highest.

Infimo

Infimo, lowest.
Poco, little.
Meno, } lesse.
Manco, }
Pochissimo, the fewest of, or extreme little.
Alto, high.
Più alto, more high.
Altissimo, } most high, highest.
Sommo, }
Molto, much, or very.
Più, more.
Moltissimo, exceeding much, very much, if plur. exceeding many.

Observe, that the generall way of comparing is by più, or meno, more or lesse, as più doto, more learned; meno doto, lesse learned; and that either di, del, che, or che non follows; as Egli è più avventurato di me, He is more fortunate than I.

Egli è più accorto del compagno, He is more wary than his fellow-partner.

Egli parla più che nessuno, He speaks more than any body.

Hanno più guai che non credono, They have more sorrows than they believe.

The like if you put meno instead of più, as Egli è men avventurato di me, He is lesse fortunate than I, &c. The same of meglio and peggio, better and worse; as Egli scrive peggio di nessuno, He writes worse than any body; Parla meglio di tutti, He speaks better than them all.

In certe cose meglio del solito, In some things he comes off better than usual; In certe altro peggio, In some others worse.

La pratica fa meglio che la teorica semplice, The practice is better than meer theory.

GP Inglese parlava meglio la lingua Italiana che non fanno i Francesi, The English speak better the Italian Language than the Frenchmen: Ma pronunziano poi la lingua Latina peggio che non fanno loro, But then they pronounce the Latin tongue worse than they do.

Observe, that by putting

Molto, } You expresse the same which in English, far, or
Assai, } much.
Più, }
Via, }

Molto più ricco, Far more rich.

Assai più letterato, Much more learned.

Via più spedita, much more ready, nimble. And then di,

Via del che, or e non, may follow, as occasion serves.

Indeed vie, or via, are not so frequently used as assai and molto.

The superlative, or highest degree is exprest as followeth.

Put il or la to più or meno, as.
Il più doto di tutti, The learnedst of all.
Il men ricco, The least rich of all.
La più bella di tutte, The handfomest of all.
La men bella, The illfavouredst of all, or the least handfome.

Again, put to words denoting quality, issimo, or issima, and you expresse the superlative.

Buono, good; buonissimo, best, or most good; masf. Buono, good; buonissima, best, or most good, fem.

utile, profitable; utilissimo, most profitable.

Doto, learned; dottissimo, most learned.

Again, double words together, and according to the signification of the word you may expresse the superlative of the same; as.

Quale volete dire di quelle Signore, quella bella bella? Which do you mean of those Ladies, she who is so extreme handfome? Che ha li denti bianchi bianchi? Who hath such infinite white teeth; E li capegli biondi biondi, and infinite faire haire.

Also, by quello, quella, quelli, quelle, &c. and maggiore or minore, according as the sense imports, you expresse a superlative, Tornate con quella maggior prestezza che potete, Come with the greatest speed you can.

Also, ogni and maggiore imply all possible, as, con Ogni maggior diligenza, With all possible diligence.

Observe, that by putting il, lo, or la, to any superlative in issimo or issima, and you make as it were yet a further degree; as by super-excellency it is said of God Almighty, L'Altissimo, the highest.

Observe, that by changing the last letter of the word ending in issimo into amente, you expresse an excellence in quality: as sicurissimo, most sure: sicurissimamente, most assuredly: perfettissimo, most perfect: perfettissimamente, most perfectly.

Sing. La sua,
 fem. hers.

Plur. Le sue,
 hers.

Singular. Il nostro, our. &c.

Plural. I, or li nostri, our. &c.

Singular. Il vostro, your.

Plural. I, or li vostri, your.

The feminines are made by changing (o) into (a) as nostro, nostra, vostro, vostra, Sing. nostre, vostre, plur. as hath been shewn of la mia, la tua, le mie, le tue; as la mia casa, my house; le mie case, my houses.

1 Observe, that if mio, tuo, suo, mia, tua, sua, end not a period, that they are pronounc'd as it were in one sound, as e mio pensiero, It is my fancy or invention; e pensiero mio, it is my care and duty, &c. The like in Dio, God, Dio voglia, God grant; Voleffe Dio, Would to God.

2 That il mio, il tuo, il suo, il nostro, il vostro, il loro, being put without addition, signifies, my wealth or estate, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; posseho il mio, I enjoy my own; and Egli possede il suo, He enjoys his own.

3 Pronouns possessive must ever have the Article specially beginning a sentence la mia casa, not mia casa, my house; il mio cavallo, not mio cavallo, my horse.

4 Observe, that i nostri, i vostri, i miei, i suoi, is meant nearest friends, kinned, or domesticks, viz. dwelling in the same household.

5 Observe, that speaking to, or of more, whether men, or women, loro is indifferent to either; as,

Il loro ben stare, your welfare.
Del loro ben stare, of your welfare.
Al loro ben stare, to your welfare.
Dal loro ben stare, from your welfare.

S. masc. Il cui, whose.
Del cui, of whose.
Al cui, to whose.
Dal cui, from whose.

Plur. Li cui, whose.
Delli cui, of whose.
Alli cui, to whose.
Dalli cui, from whose.

P. fem. La cui, whose.
Della cui, of whose.
Alla cui, to whose.
Dalla cui, from whose.

Plur. Le cui, whose.
Delle cui, of whose.
Alle cui, to whose.
Dalle cui, from whose.

S. masc. L' altrui, anothers.
Del altrui, of anothers.
Al altrui, to anothers.
Dal altrui, from anothers.

Plur. Gli altrui, others.
Degli altrui, of others.
Agl' altrui, to others.
Dagli altrui, from others.

And properly lo, del, al, dal, belongs not to altrui, but to the word following; as l' altrui potere, anothers power, that is, il potere di altri, or di alcun altro, the power of others, or of any other.

Sing. fem. L' altrui, anothers.
Del' altrui, of anothers.
Al' altrui, to anothers.
Dall' altrui, from anothers.

Plur. Le altrui, others.
Dalle altrui, of others.
Alle altrui, to others.
Dalle altrui, from others.

Observe, Di cui, of another, or others.

Ad cui, to another, or to others.

Da cui, from another, or from others, is indifferent either for gender or number, as, La robba altrui, anothers wealth; Le robbe altrui, anothers goods.

The like of Di cui, whose, or of whom.

A cui, to whose, or to whom.

Da cui, from whose, or from whom.

Observe this elegancy, that di cui comes elegantly between the Article and the noun throughout, and in each number; Il di cui honore, Whose honour; Le di cui ricchezze, Whose riches. As may also be said of lui and lei; il di lui sapere, la di lei bellezza, his knowledge, her beauty.

Da costei, from this woman.

Plur. { Costoro, these women.
Di costoro, of these women.
A costoro, to these women.
Da costoro, from these women.

Observe, that costui, colui, costei, colei, sometimes have no Article of their own, but what belongs to the word following, as hath been said of altrui, Il costui amore, This man's love, that is, L' amore di questo, The love of this man. But this Phrase is not civil, nor is it very frequent.

Costui and Costei are used onely to persons, and in a more slighting manner than colui or colei.

Sing. { Costui this man.
Di costui, of this man.
A costui, to this man.

Da costei, from these women or things.

Costui and costei us'd as questi, queste

Costui, questi, queste, are oft us'd in a singular meaning; as Costui ancor vive, He yet lives; Costui è quel tal Capitano del qual vi ho parlato, This is the Captain of which I have spoken to you of; Questi è forastiere pur anch' egli, He is a stranger also.

Questi and queste are us'd in a singular signification, when two things are required, questi relating to the first, quelli or quelli, to the latter; Giovanni & Andrea son iti in Campagna, John and Andrew are gone into the Country; Questi or questi a cavallo, questi a piedi, The former on horseback, the latter on foot. The like of quella and questa, speaking in a feminine signification; L' invidia e l' emulazione sono qualità molto differenti, quella è vizio questa virtù, Envy and emulation are two different qualities, the former is a vice, the latter a virtue.

Cid stands for quello, that; questo, this; as, Non fare cid, Do not that; Cid mi dà marcello, This troubles me, or that troubles me.

Observe, that quello and quella, with the particle (za) before either, signifies as much as in the interim, or then when; as, Lo schermitore in quello che riceve la botta fa la risposta, The Fencer in that interim that he receives the blow or thrust, returns it, or strikes or thrusts again. Il Capitano in quella che vide entrar gli inimici rimase confuso, The Captain in the interim, or when he saw the enemies enter in, remain'd astonished.

Observe, that il, del, al, dalla, is never joyned to questo or quello, nor la, della, alla, dalla, to questa or quella.

Pronouns Conjunctive or particles so called;

Ci	to us
gli	to him or them
la	her or it
le	them, to her, or to it
li	to him or them
lo	him or it
mi	to me or me
ne	to us or us
si	to himselfe or to herselfe, himselfe or herselfe
ti	to thy selfe or thy selfe
vi	to your selfe, or your selfe

If either of these come before any words, they are written apart; if after, they are incorporated into the same word, the example will clear it; Ci scrive, he writes unto us; Scrivete, &c.

Observe, that if one command by way of forbiddance, then the particle precedes; as, Non vi accostate più a questa casa per quanto vi è cara la vita, Come no more near his house, as you tender your life; not Non accostatevi, &c. But if one invite or pray, then the particle is put after, and incorporated as aforesaid; as, Accostatevi al foco, Draw near to the fire; il, signifying him, is put before words, not after; Il viddi, I saw him, not viddi il.

Observe, that when a word that is usually marked with an accent hath any of the aforesaid particles added unto it, or incorporated with it, instead of expressing the accent, the letter of the particle is doubled, and the accent omitted; Lo farò, I will or shall do it; farollo: mi amò, he lov'd me, amommi.

Observe, that when these particles are coupled together, they change i into e, whether they come before the word, or after; cogliersela, to steal away secretly, or slink, not cogliersila; se la colse, he stole away, not si la colse.

Auneduofene, being aware of it, not auneduofine; se n'auvide, he was aware of it, not si n'auvide. See more to this purpose in the Table at the end of my Introduction in octavo.

Of Verbs.

All our verbs in Imitation of the Latins are ranged in four squadrons by them named Conjugations.

1. Those of the first squadron in the infinitive end in are, with the accent on the last vowel but one as amare, to love, portare, to carry.

2. Those of the second squadron in the infinitive end in ere, with the accent over the last (e) saving one, as havere, to have, godere, to enjoy.

3. Those of the third squadron in the infinitive end in ere, with the accent over the last vowel saving two, as correre, to run, leggere, to read.

4. Those of the fourth squadron in the infinitive end in ire, with the accent over the last vowel saving one, as dormire, to sleep, morire, to die.

Of these verbs most are reducible to certain orders and are teamed Regular those which vary or are defective are teamed Irregular.

All verbs are either Active, Transitive, Passive, Reciprocall, Personall or Impersonall which are immediatly known to such as have insight into the Latin tongue; others may be pleased to learne them by wrote out of my Introduction in octavo, for here I intend to be as breif as may be.

Now because some tences of all verbs are conjugated either with the participle and help of the auxiliar verb, havere or essere with the participle and auxiliar v.e.b. essere, Note that Active and transitive verbs that is to say that passe into the subject treated meant or spoken of use the help of the auxiliar verb havere, saying. Io ho veduto e letti molti libri. I have seen and read many books; e ci ho irruovate moltissime cose curiose. And I found therein very many curious things.

Pisive

Passive or Reciprocall verbs that is to say that return into themselves, with these particles, mi. si. si. ci. vi. Which answer unto, Io, tu, lui, noi, loro, use ever the help of the Auxiliar verbs essere, saying, Io mi sono allegretto del vostro ben stare. I have joynt at your welfare, e voi vi siete doluto del mio, and you have griev'd at mine, noi ci siamo accoppiati a lui e voi vi siete vergognati di farlo. We drew nere unto him, and ye were ashamed to doe it. Potere, to be able, and volere, to be willing may in a manner come in as auxiliary verbs in as much as they are great helps to conjugate most verbs.

The Scheme of the Auxiliar Verbs, Haveire and essere may be as followeth.

Observation.

Observations about the Use of the Tenses.

1 In the three last conjugations in the third persons singular and plural of the preterimperfect tense of the Indicative mood, the a may be omitted, saying, Codea, for Codeva, Perdea, for Perdeva, Sentia, for Sentiva, Codeano, for Codevano, Perdeano, for Perdevano, Sentiano, for Sentivano, And in all the Conjugations this tense is used when one would expresse the continuing of any action, not the compleation of the same as the very word Imperfect intimareth; as, Io cantava, I was singing, Codeva, I was enjoying, Perdeva, I was losing, Sentiva, I was hearing; most Strangers mistake this Tense for the Single Preterperfect Tense.

2 The single preterperfect tense of the same mood is used when we mean to expresse a certain time past, but never the same day the action is done and besides generally there is an adverb of time prefixt, as Hieri scrissi lettere per Livorno, Yesterday I wrote letters for Legorn; not hieri ho scritto lettere l'anno santo egli fu in Roma the holy year he was at Room, not egli è stato in Roma.

3 The compound preterperfect tense, is made of the present tense of one of the two auxiliar verbs, ho I have, sono, I am, and the participle of some other verb; as, Io ho portato, I have carried, son rimasto, I have stayd, we use this tense when we intend to use any time past, but ever within the compasse of the same day, or else without setting any time meaning it to have been done a long time ago, as, Hoggi ho scritto a Napoli, To day I have written to Naples. Not Hoggi scrissi a Napoli, Il mio parente è morto in Italia, My kinsman died in Italy, not morì in Italia.

The preterpluperfect tenses we use when we mean to expresse a time past long ago, and most commonly the second confind with poiche, after that, Quando, when, guari, long, allora, then, as poiche hebbe havuto Adamo il precetto da Dio, After that Adam had had the command from God, &c.

4 The future tense is the easiest of any; for that the termination of all verbs runs a like without exception, as thus: ra. ra. ra. vengo. vete. vengo, implying shall or will, let the verb signifie what it will.

5 The present tense of the subjunctive or optative moods is all one, saying as far as the signes make a difference che o that, che that, &c. o che Io canti, o that I may sing, e tempo che Io canti, Its time that I sing, or were a singing, the first being the optative, the other the subjunctive, &c.

6 To the first preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood we generally affix some signe, or conditionall mark, as se egli haveffe il modo si farebbe valere, If he had meanes he would set himselfe forth; the signe is also tacitly understood in the same tense, Saying haveffe egli il modo, &c. had he meanes.

7 The second preterimperfect tense hath never any conditionall signe preposed unto it, but usually followeth the first preterimperfect tense of the same mood as appeareth in the fore-alledged example, se egli haveffe il modo si farebbe valere, not se egli haveffe il modo si faceffe valere. The placing of the same is not materiall, for we may as well say, si farebbe valere se egli haveffe il modo, again parlerei spesso se haveffi ben la pronomia, I would or should speak often If I had the pronouniation right, not parlassi spesso se havevi la pronomia, &c. And note that the termination of this tense is regular in all verbs whatsoever and implies would, should or could, let the verb signifie what it will, as rei, resti, rebbe, or via remmo, or raissimo, restie, rebbero, rebbono or riano.

8 Note that the preterpluperfect tenses of the subjunctive mood have a particular affinity one with another and seeme to play and gingle as se non fosse venuto il medico, il poveraccio sarebbe morto. If the Physitian had not come the poor reth had died; The same may be exprest elegantly by a shorter cutt; namely, putting both the tenses into the preterimperfect tense of the Indicative mood and the conditionall participle (se) to it, se non veniva il medico, il poveraccio moriva, being the same in signification with the former, se non fosse venuto, &c.

9 The future tense of the subjunctive or optative moods is usual with quando, but at pleasure, quando, is elegantly supplied with, che, after the participle as, quando Io havro sentito, when I shall have heard, sentito che havro quando Io havro pranzato, when I shall have din'd, pranzato che havro.

10 The infinitive mood present tense elegantly expresth the present of the Indicative, Ecco venire il Sgr: Cavaglier Paolo, Behold, or see, Sir Paul commeth, and narratively as Historians doe, the infinitive signifies the present tense, sometimes the preterimperfect tense and preterperfect tense of the Indicative mood especially upon the heads or contents of Chapters. I Signori Cardinali vestirsi di di Rosso o di di Pavorazzo secondo che porta la giornata. The Cardinals clothe either in Red or Purple as the day beareth.

11 The future of the infinitive confines much with the future in (rus) in latin. Haver ad amare (amatur)
Dover } rus a bout
esser per } to love.

12 The gerund is not frequent, but is circumscribed with a preposition and the infinitive, nel morire, dying, or morendo.

13 The participle in the first and fourth conjugations is regular ending the first in (ato) the fourth in (ito) (some onely excepted) the other of the second and third are so ambiguous, that set rules cannot be gathered as may compleatly satisfie without implication or confusion, as from rimanere, to remain, rimasto, remained, from scrivere, to writ, scritto, written.

I meane ordinarily, but by strict gramarians rules may be had that may in some sort satisfie one, such I refer to grammers that interpret by the latin.

14 The preterperfect tense of the infinitive mood is often used elegantly by putting the article il or lo, to it, and reduce't into a substantive so as that the whole phrase is substantively lo haver imparato le scienze rende men tozzi li costumi, to have learned or the learning of Arts sweetens behaviour, alluding to the Latin. Didicisse fideliter artes, Emollit mores, nec finit esse ferros.

THE MANNER OF FORMING OF VERBS.

Usefull for

GRAMMARIANS.

1. TH present tense of the indicative mood, is formed of the infinitive, by changing the three last letters into (o) as, cantare, to sing; canto, I sing.

2. The preterimperfect tense is formed from the infinitive also by changing the two last letters into va; as, cantare, to sing, cantava, I did sing, or was singing.

3. The single preterperfect tense is formed also of the infinitive, by changing in the first conjugation are into ai: in the second, ere into ei: in the third, the two last syllables into si, or ssi: in the fourth, ire into isi, as, cantare, to sing; cantai, I sang; godere, to enjoy; godei, I enjoyed; perdere, to loose; persi, I lost; scrivere, to write; scrissi, I wrote; sentire, to hear; sentii, I heard, &c.

4. The future is also formed of the infinitive, by changing, re into ro; as cantare, to sing; cantaro, I shall or will sing; godere, to enjoy; godero, I shall or will enjoy; perdere, to loose; perdero, I shall or will loose; sentire, to hear; sentiro, I shall or will hear. Observe by the way, that in the first conjugation in the future of the indicative and second preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood (e) is elegantly turned into (i) saying, cantero, I shall sing; rather than cantard, canterei, I should sing; rather than, cantarei.

5. The imperative is form'd of the first person of the present tense of the indicative, by changing (o) into (a) in the first conjugation; as; canto, I sing; canta, sing thou; but in the other three, the imperative is the same with the second person of the present tense; as, godi, enjoy thou; scrivi, write thou; senti, hear thou; The third person of the imperative in the first conjugation, is the same with the second person of the present tense of the indicative mood of the same conjugation; as, canti, thou singest; canti, sing he: in the other three conjugations, the third person is formed from the first person of the present tense of the indicative mood, by changing (o) into (a) as, godo, I enjoy; goda, enjoy he, perdo, I loose, perda, loose he, sento, I hear, senta, hear he: And in the third person plural of the first conjugation, avo is turned into ino, as, cantano, they sing, cantino, sing they: in the other three conjugations, ono is turned into ano, godono, they enjoy, godano, enjoy they, perdono, they loose, perdano loose they, sentono, they hear, sentano, hear they.

6. The present of the subjunctive or optative mood, is the same with the third person singular of the imperative, in the severall conjugations, onely the signs being added, as, o che io canti, O that I sing, or God grant I sing, o che io goda, O that I enjoy, or God grant I enjoy, o che io scriva, God grant I write, o che io senta, God grant I hear: and so throughout the tense to the last person.

7. The first preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood is formed of the second person singular of the single or uncompounded preterperfect tense of the indicative mood, changing si into ssi, as, cantasti, thou sangst, cantassi, should I sing, or if I sang, godesti, thou enjoyedst, godeffi, should I enjoy, or if I enjoyed, perdesti, thou loosedst, perdeffi, should I loose, or if I did loose, sentisti, thou heardst, sentissi, should I hear, or if I should hear.

8. The second preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood is formed of the future of the indicative by changing ro into rei, or ria, in all the four conjugations; cantero, I shall sing, canterei, or cantaria, I should sing, godero, I shall enjoy, goderei, or godaria, I should enjoy, perdero, I shall loose, perderei, or perderia, I should loose, sentiro, I shall hear, sentirei, or sentiria, I should hear.

9. The gerund, or also the active participle, as one may call it, is formed of the infinitive present, by changing in the first three conjugations, re into ndo, or nte, as, cantare, to sing, cantando, singing, godere, to enjoy, godendo, godente, enjoying, perdere, to loose, perdendo, perdente, loosing: but in the fourth conjugation, by changing re into endo or ente, and casting away the (i) as, sentire, to hear, sentendo, not sentiendo hearing though in the participle the (i) may be kept, saying, sentiente, not sentente.

10. The passive participle is also formed of the present of the infinitive, by changing re into to, cantare, to sing, cantato, sung, sentire, to hear, sentito, heard. The rule is not general, onely in the first and fourth conjugation, in the second and third, the participle varies very much, therefore look in the irregulars of those conjugations, some being to form the verbs from the present of the indicative, as being more after the Latines: But this way by practice, seems to be the easier, for as much as the infinitives, in dictionaries, are more obvious to a strangers eye, than the first person of the indicative: but all is one upon the matter.

A Series of such verbs as usually trouble those most, who understand the Latin Tongue best, in regard the signification being one and the same, they are notwithstanding of different conjugations, as Observe, that where the numbers do not follow, but skip, there they are regular, and follow the infinitive mood.

The Irregulars of the third Conjugation, chiefly vary in the Infinitive mood, in the present of the Indicative, in the second preterimperfect tenses of the Optative and subjunctive moods, being syncopated and cut short in many of them; they vary also in the single preterperfect tense of the Indicative, and in the Participle.

The other tenses may be framed by the examples of the second conjugation, as having coherency one with another in their terminations; for between the second and third conjugations there is little or no difference, but in the accenting of the infinitive mood.

This following table is necessary to be perused, containing the Infinitive mood in the first place; in the second place, the first person of the present tense of the Indicative mood; in the third place, the first person of the single preterperfect tense of the Indicative mood; in the fourth place, the Participle: the present of the subjunctive mood may easily be fram'd of the present of the Indicative, changing (a) into (e) as, ardo, ardas, &c.

4. Regular.

Note that the vulgar sayes apriamo for aprimo, copriamo for coprimo, &c. in the first person plural of the present of the indicative mood.

Besides the aforesaid verbs, there are some of the said conjugations, which are irregular, in that they make use of the syllable (sco) in four persons of the present tenses of the Indicative, Imperative, Optative, and Subjunctive moods: that is to say, the three persons singular, and the third plural, whosoever can conjugate one, may easily conjugate the rest, all other tenses being regular.

As, Io ubidisco; noi ubidiamo } I obey,
 Indic. S. tu ubidisci } voi ubidite }
 praai. egli ubidisce } essi ubidiscano }

Imper. ubidisci tu } ubidiamo noi } Obey thou!
 pref. S. ubidisca egli } ubidite voi }
                               ubidiscano essi }

Opt. O che Io ubidisca } noi ubidiamo }
 pref. S. tu ubidisca } voi ubidiate }
 &c. egli ubidisca } essi ubidiscano }

Riuscire To prove, or come off in any thing, is conjugated as uscire.

An so much of the irregulars of the four severall Conjugations.

Note, that there are some Moods and Tenses that some Verbs of all the four Conjugations are frequently contracted in

Bere to drink, from Bevere

Corre to gather, from cogliere.

Durre to lead, from ducere, and so all the derivatives and compounds of the same.

Porre to put, from ponere, and so all the derivatives and compounds of the same.

Sciurre to chuse, from sciogliere.

Sciurre to loosen, from sciogliere.

Torre to take away, from togliere, and so any derivative or compound of the same.

Trarre to draw, from trahere, and so any derivative or compound of the same.

Berrò I shall or will drink	Berrei I should or would drink.
Corrò I shall or will gather.	Correi I should or would gather.

Vorrrei for volerei I should or would be willing.
Verrrei for venirei I should or would come.

Observe that the contracts are generally more in use than when written at length.

Of the Verb passive.

In all Verbs it is made by putting the Verb sono to any passive participle: as for example.

Sing. Io sono amato I am loved.
Tu sei amato thou art loved.
Egli è amato he is loved.

Plur. Noi siamo amati we are loved.
Voi siete amati yea are loved.
Essi sono amati they are loved.

And so of all the rest of the tenses: and if feminine, amata, or amata.

Only in the third person singular and plural by putting si before or after, the passivation is express, as si ama, amasi he, or it is loved; si amano, amansi, they, or those things are loved, and so quite through the Verb, si being ever written apart if coming before, if after, incorporated, and the vowel lost, as appears by amansi and amanssi.

Note, that si never comes before Infinitives, Gerunds or Participles, as appears in this example, unless non or nd come immediately before si, as non or nd si potendo far di meno, it not being possible to do otherwise.

Verbs Neuters conjugated by the auxiliar Verb Haveve to have.

Io ho camminato I have walkt.
Io ho dovuto I have owed.
Io ho dormito I have slept.
Io ho nocciuto I have hurt.
Io ho seduto I have sate.
Io ho potuto I have been able.
Io ho voluto I have been willing, not son camminato, son dovuto,

Verbs Neuters conjugated by the Verb Essere to be.

Io sono entrato I have come in, or am come in.
Io son' uscito I am gone out, or have gone out.
Io son nato I am born.
Io son restato I have forborn.
Io son rimasto, idem:
Io son ritornato I am returned.
Io son volato I have flown, not ho entrato, &c.

These Verbs are very frequent in discourse, and therefore good heed ought to be taken that they be not misapplied.

The Verb reciprocal how conjugated.

Io mi dico I say my self.
Tu ti dici thou sayest thy self.
Egli si dice he sayeth himself.
Noi ci diciamo we say our selves.
Voi vi dite ye say your selves.
Essi si dicono they say themselves.

And so throughout all along, Io mi discovo I find my self, tu ti discovi thou sayest thy self, &c.

Others are reciprocal with particles, relating to persons or things, or both.

Io mi fido di I trust in —
Tu ti fidi di thou trustest in —
Egli si fida di he trusteth in —
Noi ci fidiamo di we trust in —
Voi vi fidate di ye trust in —
Essi si fidano di they trust in —

Io me ne rido I laugh at it.
Tu te ne ridi, thou laughest at it.
Egli se ne ride he laughs at it.
Noi ce ne ridiamo we laugh at it.
Voi ve ne ridete ye laugh at it.
Essi se ne ridono they laugh at it.

Verbs impersonals absolutely without any Particles.

Piove it raineth.
Tuona it thunders.
Nevica it snoweth.
Diluvia it pours down again.
Tempesta it storms or hails.
Balena it lightens.

The following verbs are used impersonally, viz.

Tocca it concerns.
Cale it's ones care.
Duole it grieves.
Rincretce its irksome.
Convien its fitting.
Lice its lawfull.
Deve one ought.
Puo it is possible.
Puole it may be.
Dice it becomes.
Disdice it misbecomes.
Confa it suits.
Appartiene it belongs.
Ricercia it requires.

But especially with some of these Particles, mi, si, vi, ci, ti, as for example.

Mi tocca it concerns me, or comes to my share.
Mi toccava it did concern me.
Mi è toccato it hath concerned me.
Mi toccò it concerned me.

Mi era toccato it had concerned me.
Mi fu toccato, idem.
Mi toccherà it will concern me,
Mi tocchi let it concern me.
Che mi tocchi may it concern me.
Che mi toccasse would it concern'd me.
Mi toccasse should it concern me.
Mi toccherrebbe it would concern me.
O che mi sia toccato pray God it hath concern'd me.
O che mi fosse toccato would God it had concern'd me.
Mi sarebbe toccato it would have concern'd me.
Quando mi sarà toccato when it shall have concern'd me.
Toccammi to concern me.
Havevami a cuore to be about to concern me.
Toccammi it concerning me.
Toccammi it having concern'd me.
Essermi toccato to have concern'd me.
Essendomi toccato it having concern'd me.
Essendo per toccarmi it being about to concern me.

And so of the rest.

The Verb essere is oft put impersonally with the Particles ci or vi, signifying as much as there in English.

Ci è, ecci, there is, is there? or it is there.

Ci sono, sonci, there are, are there? or they are there.

Ci era, there was, was there?

Ci erano, o'eranci, there were, or were there.

And so putting (vi) in the like manner, vi è, evvi, vi era, eravi, &c. and in the infinitive, essere or esservi, there to be, essendoci, or essendovi, there being, or being there.

Note, that in the conjugations I have used the pronouns Io, Tu, Egli, quite thorow; on purpose to use the Learner to know the Persons; and that they are always necessary in discourse or writing, practice will make this clear.

And so much for the Verbs.

The Contract Participles of the first Conjugation, which are most frequent both in writing and discourse.

A N A P P E N D I X TO THE I N T R O D U C T I O N : OR,

A SUMMARY of MISCELANY OBSERVATIONS:

The right and ready understanding of which, presupposes some insight of the Latine Tongue, or at least of terms of Grammer: All which, after a diligent perusal of the former part of this Introduction, may competently be understood, even by weak capacities, I mean such as had rather learn by rote than by rule.

I.

Generally, the finite Articles, il, lo, la, le, signifie as much as (the) in English, especially in the oblique cases, as dello of the, allo to the, dallo from the; delle, alle, delli, alli, or dagli, &c. it is put after the nature of the Greeks, at the beginning of words, rather for ornament than necessity, in relation to sense, though necessary in relation to custome, and so it may signifie as much as (a) in English; as, L'amico compatisce i difetti dell'amico, a friend bears with the defects of a friend: It were absurd to say, Amico compatisce, &c. also, La virtù è da desiderare, virtue is to be desired, not virtù è da desiderare.

II.

Homogeneous things, that is, things of the same matter, or substance, also the elements, things of nature, that grow, as fruits of the earth, usually have the finite, Iddio creò il cielo e la terra, God created heaven and earth, it were not proper to say, creò cielo e terra; and the genitive case of the finite article is used, if any uncertain quantity thereof be implied, Un tal comadi no m'ha portato delli fonghi, a certain Countrey fellow hath brought me some Mushrooms, domani m'apporgerà delle mele, to morrow he will bring me some Apples, &c. and in this case it seems to lose the sense of (the,) and so also where there is an indefiniteness of numbers, egli ha de' bei figli, he hath handfom children; as also the same finite article serves when we expresse a slight of any thing; as, le parole non sono che del vento, words are but some wind, signifying something more than le parole non sono che vento; and also being put before any appellative noun, it signifieth quantity, part or some of the same, volere del pane, will you have some bread? del vino, or some wine; but if poco be used, then use the indefinite article di; as, volere un poco di pane? will you have a little bread? or, un poco di vino, a little wine, unless some wine be specified after poco; as, dammi un poco del rosso, & un poco del bianco, give me a little of the red, and a little of the white, relating to wine, if adverbs of quantity follow the substantive, then the finite article is used, not the indefinite, egli ha de' quattrini assai, he hath moneys enough, not, egli ha di quattrini assai.

III.

A, Al, Al, Allo, Alla, Ai, A, Agli, Alli, Alle: as, gli, li, le, mi, ti, si, ci, vi, me, se, se, ce, ve, ne, coming with verbs of privation, signifie as much as (from,) contrary to their natural signification, which is (to,) egli ha levata la spada al nimico, he hath taken away the sword from the enemy; gli assassini gli hanno rubbati i suoi quattrini, the thieves have stoln away his moneys.

IV.

Da, dal, da', dalli, dagli, dalla, dalle, following any verb implying motion, so that the person or persons to whom the motion is made or intended, be named, signifies not (from) but (to) or (at) as, andate dal medico, go to the Physitian; venire da me, come to me, è io a star dalla Signora Vittoria, he is gone to dwell at Mrs. Vittoria's.

V.

The finite articles, dal, dalle, &c. serve for adverbs of exception, but then the person or thing excepted must immediatly follow the article, with in fuori, or else, in poi, as tutti gl'ufficiali furono scassati dal Alfere in poi, All the officers were calhired, but the Ensign: Tutte le donne ci possono entrare dalle Corteggiane in fuori, all the women may come in but the Courtezans.

VI.

Da coming before words of number, serves for the preposition intorno, or incirca; that is, about, or, a matter of, as nella battaglia vi furono da mille feriti, e da cento morti, in the battel there were about a thousand wounded, and a matter of a hundred kill'd out-right.

VII.

If the pronoun possessive precede the substantive, the article finite precedes the pronoun, if the pronoun come after, then there is no article prefixt to the pronoun, questa è casa mia this is my house, questa è la mia casa, &c.

VIII.

Da, frà, per, in, a, tacitely imply the finite article, Io dicevo frà mio cuore, I said in my heart: da necessità costretto, constrained by necessity, per mio diporto, for my pleasure; se messo in braccia alla fortuna, he hath put himself into the arms of fortune, a suo modo, after his own way; that is, frà il mio cuore, dalla necessità costretto, per il mio diporto, nelle braccia alla fortuna, al suo modo.

IX.

Articles, Nouns, Pronouns and Participles agree with their substantives, in gender, number, and case, i frutti acerbi sono limati.

Simai maliani, green fruits are esteemed unwholesome; le sue belle opere sono quelle che l'hanno immortalato, his fine works are those which have immortalized him: and if there be two substantives of several genders, the adjective plural agrees with the worthiest, il padre e la madre son morti, the father and the mother are dead: also two singulars require a verb plural, as in the example aforesaid, but plainer in this, Io e il mio compagno saremo dimani in Borgo, my partner and I to-morrow will be in the Borough: Giovanni, Antonio e Io andassimo a stoffo, John Anthony and I went abroad.

X.

Di is used in an ablative sense: as, levatosi il capello di capo, having pulled off his hat; viene di Napoli, he comes from Naples; also with pronouns demonstratives; it implies similitude or likeness, fare di questo, do thus.

XI.

The finite article del, dello, delli, degli, dalla, delle, is used in the sense of (for) ringrazio V. S. del favore, I thank you for the favour; not per il favore, as English men are apt to say, la ringrazio delle sue amorevolezze, I thank you for your kindness; not per la sua amorevolezza.

XII.

The indefinite article da, before infinitives, makes the same to be of a passive signification: as, carta da scrivere, writing paper, or paper to be written on: carne da mangiare, meat fit to be eaten: vino da bere, wine fit to be drunk: and with substantives, it signifies fitness, or propriety; guanti da uomo e da donna, gloves fit or proper for men and women, as much as abile able, atto fit, degn worthy.

XIII.

The finite article never comes before proper names, unless expressing the works of such a person, il Cicerone, Tullius works; il Tasso the Poet Tassius his Poems or works.

XIV.

The finite article cometh elegantly before an appellative or adjective, with a proper name after it, for comparison or distinction sake, il magno Alessandro, Alexander the great; but if the proper name precede, then the appellative shall have no article; as, Alessandro magno: observe withal, that before names of months, as at the dating of a letter, the article is elegantly omitted; as, a dì 20. Dicembre, 1658. the 20. of December, for alle vinti di Dicembre.

XV.

Generally the substantive precedes the adjective; as, pan bianco white-bread, vin puro pure wine: here custom must be attended where it deviates, for many adjectives that imply quality, good or bad, or number, go before their substantives; as, mille scudi a thousand crowns, brutto negotio a scurvy business, buon compagno a good fellow, bella giornata a fair day, cara gente ill people, infelici incontri unhappy encounters: the placing alters the sense in many, that the meaning is merely different; as uomo gallante a brave fellow, gallante uomo a well dealing man; uomo valente a valiant fellow, valente uomo an able fellow in his calling; robba buona good ware, buona robba, a Courtesan or Whore.

XVI.

The finite articles, il, lo, preceding an adjective, make the same to be a substantive, il timido l' ammonizione di Brescia non armerebbe, a fearful bodie, all the arms of Brescia would not suffice to arm, relating to persons: if relating to things or qualities, the abstract or substantive is meant thereby; decesti mai il vero wouldst thou wouldst once speak truth, rather than la verità; col vivo del cuore with a zealous heart, rather than vivezza del cuore the liveliness of the heart.

XVII.

Of noun adjectives ending in le, re, re, you make adverbs of quality, namely, by taking away (e) adding mente to them; as, facilmente easily; not facilmente: leggermente, lightly, not leggermente: particolarmente particularly, not particolarmente: but feminine adjectives ending in (a) make adverbs only by adding mente to them; as, savia wise, saviamente wisely; santa holy, santamente holily.

XVIII.

Generally names of trees are of the masculine gender; and the fruits of the feminine, as, pero, a Pear-tree, pera a Pear.

XIX.

Substantives may be adjectives, implying action or passion, by taking away the last vowel, providing it be not an (o) and putting oso to it; as, paura fear, pauroso fearful; amore love, amoroso loving, or amorous: but when they end in (o) put only (so) to it, as, bisogno need, bisognoso needful, or needy: and if you would have the adjective to express chiefly passion, turn the last vowel into (e) in case it should not end so, and put vole to it; as, bisogno need, bisognevole, full of need, or that may be needful; gusto taste, gustevole well tasted, burla a jest, burlesco that may be jested with. To the same purpose, if you will have the adjective to end in (ile) if the substantive end in (e) put bile to it, as, scusa an excuse, scusabile excusable: if in any other vowel, then take away that vowel, and put abile to it; as, lode praise, lodabile praisable: otherwise this adjective (abile) may be framed of the third person, present tense, indicative mood of verbs of the first conjugation; as, ama he loveth, amabile that may be loved.

XX.

Taking the participle of the preterperfect tense of any verb active, and putting (re) unto the same, you frame a substantive that expresseth action; as, amato loved, amatore a lover: which may be also made of the feminine gender, by changing ore into rice; amatore a Lover, amatrice a she-lover, or loveress; retto governed, retore a governor, rettrice a governess. Also by taking the third person of the present tense indicative mood of the first conjugation, and the second person singular of the same tense of any verb of the other three conjugations, and putting any noun substantive to the same, you express the instrument, and also the artificer of the same, Scalda-vivande, a chafing-dish, porta-lettere a letter-carrier; capi-fuochi hand-irons: and also the substantive may be of the plural number, though not often; as, scapri-secreti a blab or tel-tale; scaldalatti, a warming-pan, for scapri-secreti, scaldalatti.

XXI.

Taking away from masculine words belonging to any Art or trade, the last vowel, and adding aro, or aio to it, you express the professor or the artificer of the same; as, libro a book, libraro a bookseller, or libraio; capello a hat; capellaro or capellaio a hat-maker or seller. And to express the feminine turn aro or aio into ara or aia, saying capellara or capellara, a woman that makes or sells hats. Also any substantive or adjective, or verb ending in (a) put uolo to it, and you express the artificer; frutta fruit, fruttuolo a fruit-seller; bacca a boat, barcaruolo a boat-man; pizzica he taketh up, pizzicaruolo one that retailleth as a Chandler: and also in many, aruolo may be turned into aiuolo; as, legnaruolo a woodmonger, legnaiuolo idem.

XXII.

From feminine nouns ending in (a) by adding (ro) or (io) thereto, you likewise express the artificer; as, spada a sword, spadaro or spadaio a cutler; bottega a shop, bottegaro, or bottegaio a shop-keeper: change (ro) or (io) into (ra) or (ria) and you make the feminines of the same; as spadara or spadaria a woman cutler, bottegaro, bottegaria a woman shop-keeper.

XXIII.

From all names of tools or instruments, by which it is possible to strike, or otherwise to expresse capacity and fullness of any thing or place, or the worth or value of any coin, if masculine, taking away the last vowel, and adding thereto ata, you expresse the power and effect, or blow, or worth of the same; as, arcobugio a gun, arcobugiata a gunshot; bastone a cudgel, bastonata a blow with a cudgel; fusto a stone, fassata a stones cast, or a blow with a stone; capello a hat, capellata a hat-full; baiocco a Roman penny, baioccata a pennyworth; but if feminine, the vowel remains and only a is added; as, lancia a lance, lanciata a thrust with a lance; carozza a coach, carozzata a coach-full.

XXIV.

Putting alla to an adjective of the feminine gender, you expresse the similitude or likeness of any thing, or the fashion or custom of any thing, person, or place; as, all' Italiana, after the Italian fashion, alla Tedesca after the Germane fashion, alla Francese after the French fashion, alla reale royally, or really, all' antica after the old fashion, alla Cardinale Cardinal-like: where observe, that Cardinale is an adjective.

XXV.

Putting da before any substantive, whether masculine or feminine, hath the same force as alla before an adjective; sfoglia da Principe he laves it on like a Prince, sta da Principessa she dwells Princess-like.

XXVI.

In certain expressions implying doubt, or condition, instead of Io I, tù thou, egli he, ella she; me, te, lui, and lei, are rather us'd; as, Tù l'hai riverito pensando che fussene, thou salutedst him, thinking 'twas I; not, Io: egli m'ha riverito pensando che fossi io, he saluted me, thinking 'twas thee; Se io fossi lui farei altrimenti, if I were he I would do otherwise; not, Se fossi egli: Se stesse a lei di parlare, if it were for her to speak, not, se stesse a ella.

XXVII.

The conjunctive Pronouns, or ponoun particles, mi, ti, si, ci, vi, ne, if they follow, verb, gerund, or participle, are incorporated with the same, if they precede the verb, they are written apart; as, mi scrivo, he writes to me, scrivemi: but they cannot immediately precede a gerund or participle, positively speaking; as, mi dicendo, but dicendomi; mi pensando, but pensandomi: Note, that if ne, lo, la, li, gli, le, come between, then the (i) of the participle is turned into (e) me ne scrivo, he writes me of it; scrivemene, not mi ne scrivo, or scrivemine.

XXVIII.

The pronoun personal is generally understood in verbs after the manner of the Latines; scrivo a P. S. I write to you, parlo di poco I speak of little: yet in verbs reciprocal, it seems more graceful to expresse the pronoun; Io non m'inganno, I do not mistake or deceive my selfe; egli s'affatica come un cane, he labours like a dog.

XXIX.

The finite articles, il, lo, i, li, gli, la, le, in the dative and accusative cases assume the nature of pronouns relatives, quando il viddi when I saw him, quando gli parlai when thou spakest to him, &c. havete visto l'amico? have you seen our friend? Signor sì P' ho visto, yes Sir, I have seen him.

XXX.

Pronouns possessives in the singular number, exprest with a substantive, and with a finite article of the singular number imply goods or wealth, or the estate of the body; as, son paron del mio I am master of my own, il tuo lo puoi dar a chi tu vuoi, thy estate thou mayest bestow on whom thou wilt: but if the pronouns possessives be exprest in the plural number, and the finite article likewise in the plural, then they signifie relations of kindred or friends, la più parte delli miei son ancor vivi per grazia di Dio, the greatest number of my relations are as yet alive, by the grace of God, I tuoi son morti thy relations are dead.

XXXI.

The finite Article, whether masculine or feminine, singular or plural, is frequently put before possessive pronouns, which concord with their substantives that follow them, in case, gender and number, il mio cavallo my horse, il tuo, il suo, il nostro, il vostro, il loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; i miei cavalli my horses, i tuoi, i suoi, i nostri, i vostri, i loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; la mia carozza my coach, la tua, la sua, la nostra, la vostra, la loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; le mie carozze, my coaches; le tue, le sue, le nostre, le vostre, le loro, his, ours, yours, theirs: sometime the indefinite article is only used, as, di mia mano, of my hand, &c. a mio modo, after my own way; da mio fratello from my brother, the like of tuo, suo, &c.

XXXII.

Two negatives deny most, whereas in Latine they affirm Havete visto niente in piazza? Saw you nothing in the street? Io non ho vista nulla, I saw nothing at all, or in the least.

XXXIII.

When ne serves for an adverb of distinction or denial, it is accented, and usually it is iterated; as, questa medicina non mi giova, non mi nuoce, this physick neither doth me good nor hurt: when it signifies an adverb of place, namely, coming before or after verbs of motion, implying as much as hence, or thence, or away, it is written without an accent, egli se ne viene alla volta nostra, he is coming thence towards us; vaiene per i fatti tuoi, get thee hence about thy business, and coming before or after verbs that imply not motion, it signifies as much as (at it,) or (of it,) se ne ride he laughs at it, se ne lamenta, he complains of it: also written without an accent, it signifies as much as (us) or, (for us); being become a pronoun of the dative and accusative cases plural, egli ne diede il buon dì e l'buon anno; he gave us the good day, and good year; havendone visti subito ne sfuggi, having seen us, presently he shun'd us: for matter of knowing when it relates to person or place, the sense must declare it. The same is also used as an adverb of quantity, for an abbreviation, and to avoid tautologies, signifying (some, part of the same, whereof, or of them) vai m'havevi ricercato di certe cose che se io ne havesti, voi ne sareste parone, ma non havendone voi me ne baurate per iscusato, you have ask'd me about certain things, that if I had any, you should be master of them; but having not any of them, you will excuse me for the same, when it is apostroph'd, as, ne?, the masculine finite article (i) is understood, hora ne prai non si trova un puoco d'erba per miracolo, now in the fields there's not to be seen a handful of grass, if one would give never so much; also it is apostrophied when it is put interrogatively, d' vero n'?: it is true, is't not?

XXXIV.

Si generally hath these three qualities, it makes verbs passives, si ama la virtù, virtue is beloved; or, amasi la virtù: or it makes verbs reciprocal, being affixed to verbs, gerunds or participles relating to persons; as, egli si raccorda, he remembers himself, raccordarsi, to remember ones self; raccordandosi, remembring ones self; raccordatosi, having remembred himself; and so of the rest: and it makes verbs to be impersonal; as, si dice che sia seguita una gran battaglia, they say, or it is said, that there hath been a great battel. But it also hath some other significations; as usually it is an adverb of affirmation; as, sì Signor, or Signor sì, sì Signora, Signora sì, yes Sir, yes Madam; and then it is accented: also it is an adverb of comparison, or similitude, signifying so, or as well; as cavagliero si avventurava non fu mai, there was never such, or so fortunate a Gentleman: or sometimes an adverb of quantity, signifying as well, as much; ambo felici, la moglie come il marito, both happy, as well the wife as the husband; husband; Io m'adopero per il vostro interesse quanto per il mio, I endeavour as well for your interest as my own; and then it is also accented: sometimes it signifies yet, or nevertheless, se per altro non mi vuoi amare, si a' animi perche ti son parente, if thou wilt love me for no end, yet love me because I am thy kinsman: also then it is accented. Lastly observe, that it is more elegantly put before the auxiliar verb, than after the infinitive mood following; as it is more elegant and usual in discourse, to say, si può veramente lodar questa moda, this fashion may truly be commended; rather than, può veramente lodarsi questa moda.

XXXV.

The particles di, e, egli, ei, ben, ne, già pur, me, che, il, have very oft no signification, and are only put or inserted into a phrase, for ornament-sake; as, vi sono di molti che nolla credono questa nova, there are many who believe not this news, &c.

XXXVI.

As gli accompanied with ne, la, lo, le, serves in the singular number both to masculines and feminines; gliene parlai, I spake to him or her of it; gliela diedi, I gave it him or her; gl'elo scrissi, I wrote it him or her: so it serves in the dative plural, both to masculines and feminines, signifying so much as lore to them, specially the particle (se) that is (si) the (i) turned into (e) preceding, which causeth an impersonality or passivation; non hanno vino, ma se gliene darà, they have no wine, but there shall be some given them: where them may relate to either gender, il presente è ammanito, però se gl'elo potrà mandare, the present is ready, and therefore it may be sent them.

XXXVII.

To interrogations made of di dove? that is, whence are you? what Countryman are you? if it be of a general place, as of a Kingdom or Commonwealth, answer is made by di; as, di dove siete? answer, di Italia, di Spagna, of Italy, of Spain, that is as much as Italiano an Italian, Spagnuolo a Spaniard: but if of a particular place, as of some Town or City, or so; then answer is best made by da; as, di dove siete? whence are you? answer, da Albano, da Tivoli, of Alban, or of Tivoli: some say, da dove siete?

XXXVIII.

Verbs that imply addition or application to any thing; as verbs of coming, feeling, going, exhorting, studying, learning, indenting, beginning, making, forcing, preparing, inviting, moving, persuading, inventing, require rather a or ad, after them than di (to); comincio a capire I begin to conceive or apprehend, not di capire; egli si prepara a combattere he prepares himself to fight: ti affrettati troppo ad arricchiare, thou makest too much halt to be rich, not di combattere, di arricchire: mi pongo a sedere perche son stracco, I set me down, because I am weary; not, di sedere: mi avveggo a parlare, I use my self to speak; not, di parlare: the like of mi sforzo I force my self; mi trattengo I stay, mi ritardo I linger, sto I stand, or am, consiglio I counsel, supplifico I intreat, arrivo I arrive, persuado I persuade, esorto I exhort, stimolo I provoke, vengo I come, seguo I follow: all better with a or ad than di.

XXXIX.

The masculine finite article put before an infinitive, makes the same to assume the nature of a substantive, or gerund in English; as, il parlare di jouerchio è segnale di pazzia excessive speech, or over much speaking, is a sign of folly or madness: the like if it be joyned with any preposition or pronoun demonstrative; as, col studiare s' impara; that is, con lo studiare, &c by studying one learns: quel parlar tanto al ultimo stracca, that speaking so much, at last wearieeth.

XL.

All phrases or expressions which suppose a thing to be certain, the conjunction (che) following the same, require the indicative mood, not the subjunctive mood; as, sò or conosco I know, vedo I see, affirmo I affirm, accorgo I perceive, osservo I observe, odo I hear, seno I feel, tocco I touch, gusto I taste, tasto I feel, trovo I find, giudico I judge, raccanto I relate, mantengo I maintain; as, sò che dici la verità, or il vero, I know thou sayst true, &c. but these following, penso I think, credo I believe, stimo I suppose, dubito I doubt, mi rallegro I am glad, mi doglio I am sorry, mi maraviglio I wonder, after the conjunction (che) either the indicative or subjunctive may indifferently follow, Io penso che è donna honorata, I think she is an honest woman; or, che sia donna honorata: but if a negative particle come before these, then it is best the subjunctive follow (che); as, non pensate che Io sia così trascurato, che non sappia il fatto mio, do not think that I am so overseen, as that I know not my interest, or what is best for me; though some verbs are indifferent to a, ad, di; or che.

XLI.

Verbs generally have after them a, ad, or di, with an infinitive, or else (che) with a subjunctive, Prego V. S. a farmi questa gratia, I pray your Lordship to do me this favour: la prego di farmi questa gratia, I pray you to do me the favour; or, la prego che mi faccia questa gratia, I pray you that you would be pleased to do me the favour; or, la prego che mi voglia far la gratia: Use must make perfectness in these occasions.

XLII.

Per, with an infinitive, or any perfect tense of the same, implies causality or reason, wherefore any thing is done, or hath been done, fu liberato per esser forestiere, he was freed, because he was a stranger: fu giustiziato per haver assassinato, he was executed for having robb'd and murder'd, or because he robb'd and murder'd: mi son messo a tavola per esser che non seie venuto all' hora determinata, I sat me down to meat, forasmuch as you came not at the appointed hour.

XLIII.

When the present tense of the indicative mood is used, then the present tense of the subjunctive mood answers to it; egli mi prega che Io li faccia quel servizio, he intreats me to do him that civility; not, che li facesse: but if the preterimperfect tense, or preterperfect tenses of the indicative mood be used, then the preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood answers to it; as, egli mi pregava costanza che Io li facessi quel servizio, he prayed me, or was at me earnestly, that I would do him that civility; not, li faccia. Also, mi pregò, or, m'hauea pregato che li facesse, &c. he prayed me, or had prayed me, that I would, &c.

XLIV.

The infinitives of verbs may lose their last vowel, amar, godere, legger, sentir, unless they end a period; then, amare, godere, leggere, sentire: the like of noun substantives or adjectives ending in are or ore, mi fa favor particolare, mi fa particolar favore, writing the word at length still, if it end the period; il bel morir tutta la vita honora, a noble death crowns a mans whole life; amor fa'l bel servire, love makes service pleasant.

XLV.

The verbs, sapere, to know or be able, fare to do, dovere to owe, accadere to happen, solere to be wont, are seldom or never exprest with (di); as, egli sa parlar latino, he can speak latine; not, sa di parlar latino, sa scrivere una mano corsiva, he can write a running hand; not, sa di scrivere: though it is proper to say, sa di latino, he hath skill in the latine; or, sa di scrittura, he understands writing, &c. di is generally used after a substantive; as, ha voglia di magnare, he hath a mind to eat; ha l' animo di mortificarmi, his mind is to punish me; not, ha voglia a magnare; or, ha animo a mortificarmi.

XLVI.

The particle si is elegantly put before the auxiliar, which is due to the infinitive; as, queste cose non si hanno da dire, these things ought not to be said, instead of non hanno da dirsi: queste cose non si possono dire, these things cannot be said, instead of non possono dirsi: la lezione si ha da imparare a mente, the lesson is to be learnt by heart, instead of ha da impararsi a mente.

XLVII.

The verbs, posso I can, voglio I will, being accompanied with reciprocals, admit either of the auxiliar verbs, havere to have, or essere to be, if they have the pronoun particles after them, then they take the verb essere; as, io non ho potuto attribuirvi tal lode, I have not been able to attribute to my selfe such praise: but if the pronoun particle precede, then the verb essere is used, as, non mi son voluto attribuir tal lode.

XLVIII.

There being neuters actives and neuters passives, heed is to be taken in the right use of them, for the active neuters in their compound preterperfect tenses are joyned with the verb essere to have; as, ho camminato I have gone, walkt, or marcht, not, son camminato: ho dormito I have slept, not, son dormito: ho potuto I have been able, not, son potuto: ho dovuto I have owed, not, son dovuto: ho nocciuto I have offended, or done hurt unto, not, son nocciuto: ho voluto I have been willing, not, son voluto: whereas passive neuters in their compound preterperfect tenses are joyned with the verb essere; as, io sono stato I have been, not, io ho stato: io sono andato I have gone, not, io ho andato: io sono entrato I have entred, not, ho entrato: sono uscito I am gone out, or, I went out, not ho uscito: son nato I was born, not ho nato: son restato, or rimasto I tarried or remained, not ho restato or rimasto: son ritornato I returned, not, ho ritornato: son volato I have flown, not ho volato: And these are only passive by name, in as much as they assume to them the verb essere, but in effect they are actives: and to this purpose observe, that neuter passives, so called in their compound preterperfect tenses, have, or ought to have their passive participle agreeing in gender and number with their agent, due fanciulli son nati ad un parto, two children born at a birth: la Signora se n'è uscita in carrozza, my Lady is gone out in a coach: whereas in the neuters active it is not necessary so to be: as, i patrani hanno havuto bel tempo, our masters have had fair weather; not, havuni bel tempo: la Signora ha partorito due figli ad un parto, my Lady hath brought forth two children at a birth; not, partoriti, or partorini: ha penato a partorire, she hath had pains in her delivery, not penata. Observe also that some neuters may assume either of the auxiliars, essere, or havere, io mi son fatto male, I have done my self hurt; or, mi ho fatto male.

XLIX.

The Verb fare, when it signifies to play, act, or represent any person or thing, sometimes requires an accusative case; as, costui fa il pedante, this fellow plays or acts the pedant: sometimes the genitive, as, costui fa del pedante.

L.

Verbs of giving or privation, recommending, promising, or interceding, besides an accusative case of the thing require a dative case of the person: as, io gli ho imparato la Rhetorica, I have taught him Rhetorick: egli mi ha levato il pane, he hath taken away my bread or livelihood, &c.

LI.

These verbs, havere, toccare, pizzicare, sapere, are put with a genitive case, and the finite article, when they are meant to expresse either simplicity or confidence; as, ha del ignorante, he hath something of a dull man in him: socca del Francese, he hath a touch of the French humour: pizzica del vi'lano, he hath somewhat of a Clown in him; fa del pedante, it's pedantical.

LII.

What ever tense the question is of, the answer ought to be in the same, dove andaste hieri? where wentst thou yesterday? answer, andai fuor di Roma, I went out of Rome.

LIII.

One may command or intreat in the following ways: speaking to an equal, use the second person plural of the present tense of the indicative mood, paylate forte accio che vi senta, speak loud, that I may hear you: also by the second person plural of the present tense of the subjunctive mood of any Verb, sapete molo dire a tempo se volete venire, tel me in time, or give me notice in time whether you'll come, or if you come: speaking to a superior, or much honoured friend, use the third person of the subjunctive mood present tense, P. S. mi dica il suo parere, be pleas'd to tell me your opinion: if speaking to more than one, dicano le Signorie loro i loro pareri, be pleas'd my masters to speak your opinions: speaking to an inferior, or else a bosome friend, use the imperative, và presto, camina, go quickly, march away, parla piano, speak softly.

LIV.

The ways of forbidding or diswading are as follows: speaking to an equal use the second person plural of the present tense of the indicative mood, and prepose thereto the negative particle (non): non andate che ve ne pentirete, do not go, for you'll repent you of it; also you may use the auxiliar verb volere, in the second person plural of the subjunctive mood, present tense, putting thereto the negative (non): non vogliate dire queste cose ad un par mio, I pray do not offer to tell these things to such a one as I: speaking to a superior or much honoured friend, use the third person singular of the subjunctive mood, present tense, with the negative particle; as, non dica questo per gratia, say not so, I beseech you Sir: non vada che è tardi, do not go, Sir, for it is late: if speaking to more than one, then, non dicano questo lor altri Signori, non vadano, che è tardi, say not this my masters go not, for it is late: speaking to an inferior or intimate friend, put the negative particle to the infinitive mood; as, non fare questi spropositi che non ti riusciranno, commit not such absurdities, they will not fadge; non dir questo a nessuno, do not tell this to any body.

LV.

The negative (non) and the pronoun particle, are elegantly put betwixt di, and the infinitive mood, egli fa finta di non mi vedere, he makes as though he sees me not, instead of, fa finta di non vedermi.

LVI.

The gerund accompanied with these two verbs stà I stand, or am, vo I go, is not only proper, but emphatical; as, stà scrivendo lettere al paese, I am writing letters home to my Countrey: vo facendo delle righe, I am drawing of lines; rather than io scrivo al paese, or io fo delle righe.

LVII.

The gerund usually hath a noun, or pronoun after it; as, facendo lui che è robba di contrabando non dovrebbe comprarne, he knowing that it is a prohibited commodity, should not buy any of it.

LVIII.

No pronoun particle precedes a gerund, unless non precedes the particle; as, non gli dicendo il vero come vuoi che egli sappia giudicare, you not telling him the truth, how would you have him judge.

LIX.

Essendo and havendo are elegantly omitted, both in discourse and writing, and the passive particle us'd, which agrees in gender and number with the substantive; as, fate le feste tornerò a studiare, when the holidays are done, or are over, I'll study again; instead of essendo fatte le feste, the holidays being ended: fatto pranzo sarò da voi, when dinner is done, or as soon as dinner is ended, I'll be with you, or for you, instead of havendo pranzato, having dined: also subito is elegantly put before the participle, subito pranzato andar a dormire è mal sano, as soon as one hath sup'd, to go to bed is unwholesome.

LX.

The passive particle is elegantly us'd with the conjunction che, following the same, and the futures havrà, sarà; I shall have, or shal beas. finita che havrà la lezione me n'andrò a spisso, as soon as my lesson is done, I'll go abroad, instead of quando havrà finita la lezione; and the participle may also agree in gender with the substantive or not, it being no error to say, finito che havrà la lezione: but the other seems more graceful: Also the passive participle is elegantly used after the third person singular, or plural of the verbs, andare to go, or venire to come; as, la letina non v'è adoperata nè con Maestri nè con Medici, niggardlinesse ought not to be used either with Matters or Physicians: le cose vanno fatte a questo modo, things ought to be done. after this manner: se mi venisse fatto, if it should fall out pat for me. se mi verranno scritte le nuove, if the news shall be written to me.

LXI.

The passive participle in compound tenses of verbs, is used without regard to gender or number, if the verb have a neuter signification; as, n'ha consolati quei pochi che stavano per disperarsi, he hath comforted a good many who were like to despair: come ha ben capito i nostri modi di dire, how well he hath apprehended our manner of speaking: mia madre ha infatuato hoggi, my mother was brought to bed to day, not infatuata: but if the verb have a transitive sense, and that the accusative case hath a passive dependance from the same, then the participle may elegantly agree with the substantive, in case, gender, and number; ho scritte queste lettere a posta per dar parte a V. S. di quanto è seguito qui fra noi, I have written unto you these letters, for to acquaint you what hath happened here among us: you may also indifferently say, ho scritte queste lettere, as already hath been hinted; but if the participle be absolutely passive, and that it come with the verb essere, as may appear in the conjugation of the passive verb, then the participle agrees in case, gender, and number with its substantive: Io sono scritto al libro, I am set down in the book, if a man speak: Io sono scritta al libro, if a woman speak: noi siamo scritti al libro we are set down in the book, if men speak: noi siamo scritte al libro, if women speak.

LXII.

The active participle is us'd rather in the nature of a substantive, than as a participle; as vivente, is rather a person, than the act of living: ogni vivente, every living creature: for when we expresse such a one being living the gerund in do is used; as, vivendo la matrigna non c'è da far bene, the mother in law yet living, there's no good to be done; rather than vivente la matrigna: and though it were not an error in syntax, yet it were an error in propriety; and though it may have been used, yet it is not imitable.

LXIII.

Gerunds generally assume the nature of noun adjectives; as, Riverendo Padre, reverend Father, stupendo pensiero, an admirable conceit.

LXIV.

The Gerund many times is accompanied with the preposition (in) in passando gliene sarà molto, as I passe by Ile give him notice of it; which is as much as, nel passare, in the passage, or in passing.

LXV.

When (si) is added or incorporated with any third person of any verb singular or plural, or to any infinitive mood, the last vowel of the said verb is to be omitted; as, si dicono are said: diconsi (not diconosi) da qui può argomentarsi, hence it may be argued, not, argomentarsi; and besides, the accent never removes from the first place, though it be position.

LXVI.

Putting pure after any verb, specially in the sense of entreaty or command, you urge and provoke to that purpose; as, dite pure il fatto vostro, speak but your business, out with it confidently: enri pure, be pleas'd to come in, here is no danger.

LXVII.

These following particles, mi, ti, si, lui, lor, ci, vi, ne, lo, la, gli, li, le, are placed properly, immediately after the infinitive, gerund, participle, or imperative of any verb, and not so properly betwixt the preposition, the infinitive, gerund, participle, or imperative; as, per farmi piacere, to do me a pleasure; not, per mi far piacere, facendomi piacere, doing me a pleasure; not mi facendo piacere; fatomi piacere, having done me a pleasure; not mi fatto piacere, fatemi piacere, do me a pleasure, use me kindly; not mi fate piacere, and so consequently of the rest of the specified particles.

LXVIII.

The pronoun participles mi, ti, si, &c. are more proper to be used than the pronouns me, te, se, except some emphasis or distinction be implied; as, se incolpa d'ogni cosa, he blames himself for every thing: si chiamo in testimonia, I call thee to witnesse.

LXIX.

Where the English Interrogations say, whose? Italians say, di chi; as, di chi è quel cavallo? whose horse is that? answer, è del Signor Cavalier Antonio, Six Antonies; or del suo Signor zio, or your Unkles.

LXX.

The usual questions about distances of place are such, quanto si fa sin a Napoli? how far is it counted to Naples? quante giornate ponno esser da qui a Loreto? how many days journey can it be from hence to Loreto? in quanto tempo si può mai andar a Venezia? how long, or in how long time can one be going to Venice? answer is made, tante miglia so many miles, tante giornate so many days journey, in tanti giorni in so many days.

LXXI.

With verbs of motion, after the nature of the Latines, in hoc, and illuc, we use quà & là. and with verbs of rest qui and là answering to hic & illic: but the vulgar useth either promiscuously; the best way and the safest is according to the Latines, passa quà come hither; rather than passa qui: và là go yonder, rather than và lì: dove è where is he? è qui he is here, not quà. è lì he is there, not là.

LXXII.

The conjunction che is elegantly preposed to participles, either when one would blesse or curse, che benedette sia le poppe che gli diedero latte, blessed be the breasts that gave him suck: che maledetto sia il ponto e l' hora che nacque, cursed be the minute or hour that he was born: also che is us'd for perche, why? but among the conjunctions, the examples will be more ready.

LXXIII.

When che is doubled, it is very elegantly put for what in; as, furono ammazzati dieci mila, che in fanti che in cavallieri, there were ten thousand kill'd, what in foot, what in horse,

LXXIV.

The preposition di, in an expression that implies negation or denial, hath the meaning of avanti, before; as, egli non ritornerà di tre mesi, he will not return this three months, or before these three months be expired: di signifies upon, applied to the day of the week, in Domenica on a Sunday.

LXXV.

When di comes before any word, signifying time or season of the year, it signifies as much as in; di giorno, di notte, in the day time, or in the night time; di state in summer; d' inverno, in winter.

LXXVI. The ## LXXVI.

The preposition in is prefix to words signifying motion or rest; as, è in piazza, he is gone into the place or street: or also it signifies rest; express without any article; as, egli è in casa, he is at home, or in the house.

LXXVII.

The negative non is put in answer, when the verb is repeated; as, sestato a Palazzo? have you been at Court? Non ci son stato, I have not been there: but no is put in answer, when nothing else follows; volete venire? will you come? answer, no, not.

LXXVIII.

The preposition per is local sometimes, as, egli cammina per Roma he walks in Roma, or through the streets of Roma; or about Roma; or cammina per la camera, he walks in the chamber, or about the chamber.

LXXIX.

The same preposition serves by way of distribution or division: un piccione per gentiluomo, every man a pigeon; un scudo per uno, a crown a piece.

LXXX.

The same preposition, with verbs that imply not motion, signifies as much as in or all over; as, egli si sente una doglia per tutta la vita, he feels an ach in, or all over his body.

LXXXI.

The preposition re of the Latines, in compounds before a single consonant, for the most part change (e) into (i), as, renovare to renew, rinovare; but before double consonants, it changeth not; as, respirare to breathe, restare to remain, restituire to restore, being the same, both in Latine and Italian, except risplendere to shine, rispondere to answer; not resplendere, respondere.

LXXXII.

The prepositions in, is, dis, mis, s, added to any active or passive verb, or otherwise to any noun substantive, adjective or participle, the same becometh of a privative sense; as, in-disposto indisposed, is-memorato forgetful, dis-fatto undone, mis-credente, an unbeliever: s-facendo idle, out of employment; yet in some the s doth not make privation, but a gentle position; as, sforzare to force, sforzare to force the more; correre to run, scorrere to over-run.

LXXXIII.

These prepositions (a) to (e) and (d) or, if they come before words beginning with vowels, the (a) receives a (d) the (e) a (i), or a (d), the (d) a (d), for the pleasantness of pronunciation; scrivo ad Andrea, I write to Andrea; ad Antonio, and to Anthony; d lui ed alcuni altri, either he or some other.

As for monosyllables, as ci, ne, &c. more may be had in their severall places in the Dictionary it self.
